Recovery at Work

David got a job working three nights a week at a Madison-area Qdoba after being out of the workforce for nearly 10 years (with the exception of occasional contract work) while he focused on stabilizing his mental health. He was growing frustrated with minimal job leads and lackluster results of his independent job search so he contacted Chrysalis.

He met weekly with an employment specialist to learn about job leads, fill out applications, practice how to talk with potential employers, and identify areas for improvement after interviews.

From working with Chrysalis, I got good advice about filling out applications and learned things about the job search I didn't know before. The regular, weekly meetings kept the momentum going. It's easier to persist with someone working alongside you."

Ashley Glass, his employment specialist at Chrysalis, echoes the valuable nature of the partnership. "Neither of us gave up, we both kept at it, together."

Having this job has really improved my mood. I feel a lot better about my life and I feel like I'm doing something productive. I have more self-esteem because my life has more purpose."

Help individuals find purpose and mental health recovery as they transition into the workforce. Make a tax-deductible donation to Chrysalis.
